The Bombay Gazette.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1872.

WE have to acknowledge receipt of the Report on the Administration of the Punjab and its Dependencies for the year 1871-72, which has just been issued from the Government Press at Lahore. It is both a luminous and a voluminous volume; for, though it is bulky in size, it is well arranged and is a very valuable compilation.

In the present state of Central Asia the portion of this volume which relates to the Independent States and Frontier Tribes will be turned to with curiosity, but it does not contain much of interest or importance. There is the usual assurance that all is well in these quarters, and though, during the year under consideration, envoys to the Indian Government arrived in the Punjab from Yarkand and Bokhara, bearing also letters to Her Majesty the Queen, all we learn about them is that they were received with every consideration and returned bearing letters and presents to their respective Chiefs. It seems that the new route to Yarkand, of which much has been said during the last two years, is in reality an exceedingly difficult one. More attention is given in this report to the affairs of Afghanistan, and it contains something like a compendious history of that country in the year under review. It commences with the taking of Herat by the Sirdar Yakoob Khan, the Ameer's eldest son—relates the offer of submission made by Yakoob Khan to Shere Ali, the anger of that Ameer on hearing of the fall of Herat, and the restoration, after a time, of his eldest son to position if not to favour. Yakoob Khan is not yet trusted to any extent by his father, and the province of Herat has suffered so much from raids and civil war, that the administration cannot be properly carried on without assistance from Cabul. There are the usual announcements of tribes which have revolted and of chiefs who have been murdered, which make up the ordinary tenor of Afghan history. As regards the disputes on the Seistan frontier, between Afghanistan and Persia, it is now officially announced that it is Persia which has objected to the decision come to by the mission of Generals Goldsmid and Pollock, which was appointed to arbitrate on these boundary disputes and so to put an end to the furious recriminations, raids and reprisals to which they were constantly giving rise. As the Persians have objected to the decision arrived at by the arbitrators, the final decision, according to the terms of agreement between the two States, rests with the Home Government. We are glad to learn that Dr. Bellew, who accompanied this Mission and who had before visited Afghanistan in connection with Colonel Lumsden's Mission, has collected much scientific information of value and interest.

Turning to the affairs of the Punjab itself, we find that the year under review was a prosperous one, and was the more welcome on that account because of its coming after several years of drought and famine. Its population is now estimated at nineteen millions of souls, or nearly three millions more than the population of Spain. If we consider the energetic character of that country and the undeveloped resources of their country, we may see how very great and important a possession it is and of what value it may be in relation to the rest of India. We are glad to learn that important legislative measures which have been passed in 1871-72 have made Punjab law as "lucid in several most important subjects as "before it was obscure." That is an official view of the subject, no doubt, but it is something to get officials to admit that anything with which they are concerned is, or ever has been, obscure. Whatever may be said in Calcutta about Mr. Fitzjames Stephen and his work in India, it is clear that he has some arduous admirers in the Punjab, for "the Lieutenant-"Governor considers that it will not here be "inappropriate to acknowledge with gratitude, "the energy and ability of the Hon. Fitz-"james Stephen, Legislative Member of "the Council of the Government of India, to "whose untiring exertions the preparation and "passing of the Acts abovenamed are primarily "due. They have revolutionized the legal "system of the Punjab; but it has been a "revolution in the entire interests of simplicity "and clearness of procedure."

It is of importance to note what has been the experience of the Punjab in regard to the working of the Decentralization Scheme. While we are told that Bombay is a powder magazine and is totally unfit to manage its own municipal affairs, we find in this, comparatively speaking, newly-conquered province of the Punjab full of a warlike people, that, in forming the District Committees which have to manage the provisional budgets, the Lieutenant-Governor has in no case kept down the number of non-official members to the minimum prescribed by the Government of India. He has appointed all native gentlemen of independence and position competent to administer large funds; the number of non-official members is very largely in excess of the official; and he has directed that all the proceedings at the meetings of the Committees should be conducted in the vernacular. The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that the system of financial decentralization has so far worked well; but he is strongly of opinion that it will be more equitable to allow local Governments and Administrations a proportionate share of the general revenue raised in the province, rather than to assign fixed grants for certain services made provincial.

In regard to the important subject of the Income-tax, we find it asserted that as regards the Punjab, the frequent changes in the rate at which it has been assessed makes it exceedingly difficult to determine how far the work of the assessment and the collection of it has been performed. Complaints are few, and the Lieutenant-Governor believes that this tax has not been worked in an oppressive manner. A special explanation of these facts, however, is afforded and reasons assigned why the complaints which have been caused by the working of the Income-tax in other provinces should have no weight in the Punjab. There the districts are small and compact, and the Chief Revenue Officer, being the Magistrate of the District, is able to check the returns and supervise the work of his subordinates, while the great body of the agriculturists escape the tax altogether, "and the "tax is paid by the inhabitants of the towns "and by Government officials."

But there is a dark spot in the statistics of the Punjab, and that is to be found in its Police and Judicial Departments. Offences are on the increase, and so is litigation, and in a far greater ratio than the growth of the population might be supposed to justify. Were it not accompanied by an increase of criminal offences, the increase of litigation would not be an unfavourable symptom in such a province as the Punjab. Mr. Davies tries to make out that "the "Punjab is growing more and more a law-"abiding country," inasmuch as it indicates that the people are willing to refer their disputes to the civil tribunals, instead of taking the law into their own hands. But when we find that, at the same time, there is a great increase of criminal cases, we require some definite proof that the increase in litigationing arises from the Punjab becoming more and more a law-abiding country. In certain districts we find the range of increase in litigation over the preceding year was no less than from 20 to 43 per cent. As regards the increase in criminal offences the report under consideration is quite out-spoken. "The large increase," it says, "in criminal cases is altogether unsatis-"factory. It points to a weak executive and "a baffled Police." The blame is laid chiefly upon the over-working of judicial officers, who in the Punjab are often executive officers also. The weight of civil judicial work which falls upon him prevents the Magistrate from holding his district in proper control, from keeping the working of the police at a high standard of excellence, and from personally being acquainted with the character and work of all his subordinates. The consequence of the District Officer having become little more than a Civil Judge is that he seldom leaves his court or visits his district; he knows little about the people; revenue is lost to Government, and there is a general weakening of the authority of Government throughout the province. A scheme has been submitted to the Government of India for the re-organization of the services and a separation of the judicial and executive branches. Many officers, however, of the greatest experience, have objected to any departure from the existing system. Their argument is that the hands of the district officer require strengthening not weakening, and that the only security against the corruption of native subordinates is to allow him full control over the whole of the judicial agency of his district. Nothing appears to have been decided as yet as regards this matter, but the whole question of the re-organization of the service is again under consideration.

As regards Municipal government itself, "the "Lieutenant-Governor considers that with "many defects the experiment of entrusting the "people with the conduct of their municipal "affairs has most fully justified its adoption. "He believes that it is a most important agent "in the education of the people, and that year "by year the population of the larger towns "are becoming more intelligent and independ-"ent, and more able to wisely administer muni-"cipal affairs in accordance with those ge-"neral principles which the Government is "compelled to assert." This is important testimony in regard to the working of Municipalities, and it is also notable that the Lieutenant-Governor has expressed his willingness to grant the power of election of their own members to all Municipalities of the first class and to the more important ones of the second class. We hardly think that is a movement in a right direction, and we fear that, if we understand it rightly, its effect would be to produce something like close and rotten boroughs.

There are other subjects of interest in this report to which we may return, and we can safely recommend it as containing a great amount of valuable and well arranged information.

ANUNDORUM BOROOAH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The accompanying verses appeared, if I mistake not, some two years ago in a paper published in the N. W. P. The subject, however, has not yet lost its interest, as none can be regarded as having "passed for the C. S." until he has undergone the ordeal of the final examination; and when the competition wallahs of 1870 are only [illegible] into the already overflowing service.

I would therefore [illegible] republish these verses written from recollection, and I trust that the author will forgive me if, from defect of memory, I have made any alteration in the excellence of the original.

It is true that the piece has appeared before, but I think it a pity that verses of such merit and (so to speak) cosmopolitan interest, should be consigned to the comparative obscurity of a local journal.

I.

There is a sound that haunts my ear,
That holds me with a spell of power,
From sunset to the day dawn clear,
From dawn until the sunset hour.
'Tis not the blast's autumnal roar;
'Tis not the sound of water's falling;
'Tis no sweet music lored of yore,
Lost echoes of the past recalling;
'Tis not the strain that thrills the air
At midnight when the bulbul sings;
'Tis not the name of maiden fair;
'Tis not —— a thousand other things:
In short, 'tis what you ne'er could guess,
Know then 'tis nothing more nor less
Than what seven syllables express,
The name of that late-passed C. S.!
Anundorum Boroosh!

When Haileybury's hall of fame
Fell, mocked at as an old world sham,
And India's Service first became
The medal of merit—and of cram,
We looked in course of time to see
Muir, Lawrence, rank with Chatterjee,
And Plowdens alternate with Dutt,
And Ghoses elbow Elliotts,
But vengeful Heaven strike me dumb,
If e'er we thought of name so rum
As this of thine, Anundorum!
Anundorum Boroosh!

By day when I to court repair
(Where day by day on judgment chair
By dint of many a wild surmise,
I strive to strike a balance fair
Between contending sets of lies),
That eirie name pursues me there,
Mocked by all sounds that round me rise,
Droned in the Amlah's monotone,
Blent with each tax-appellant's moan,
And buzzing with the buzzing flies,
My very goose-quill seized with crazes,
Half automatically traces
Anundorum all kinds of ways,
Boroosh in all sorts of places!
Like Dickens's immortal Toots,
A forger innocent of blame,
I try how large, how small hand suits
The letters of that wondrous name;
How flourished capitals become
The signature Anundorum.
Anundorum Borocah.

At night, when swinging o'er my bed
The punkah fans my weary head,
Still to the tune Anundorum
The waving fringes go and come;
And when the cooly drops the rope,
And I about my chamber grope,
Irate, but mute,
For brush or boot,
Or fragments of carbolic soap,
Or volumes of fat Law Digest,
As missiles to disturb his rest,
Then seem, as if by fiends possest,
Mosquitoes with infernal hum
To iterate Anundorum.
Anundorum Borooah.

I sleep—that name becomes the theme
Of many a changing troublous dream;
Full oft, in fitful slumber tost,
I see a battle won and lost.
I hear Boroosh's dread cognomen,
Sound fear and death to flying foeman;
Anon returns the conquering host,
While thunders every thundering drum,
"Anundorum, Anundorum."

As home they march in victor state,
A band of maidens young and gay
Comes tripping from the city gate,
And some with roses strew the way,
Some wave green palms in air, and some
On lutes of sounding amber thrum
The praises of Anundorum.
Anundorum Borooah.

'Tis past—my dream is changed—and now
There seems beside my couch to stand
With earnest eyes and thoughtful brow
A Wallah—son of Scotia's land:
No Philistine—a child of light—
While such as he win India's praise,
Still Scotland as in ancient days
May glory in her Wallah's might.

II.

Who is it but that smart young man,
In lore of languages excelling,
Of late with a new-fangled plan
Let loose to teach all India spelling!
Him do I greet with clamorous glee,
Oh! mighty Hunter, LL.D.,
Let Ondo be spelt as heretofore,
Let Kaunpur still be writ Cawnpore,
For I have work more meet for thee!
The hour is come when thou, the man
Who canst (although none other can)
Resolve this tough conundrum—
How shall we spell Anundorum?
Anundorum Borooah?

In shades of visionary mist,
With look that's somewhat posed and glum,
He sinks—the Etymologist—
Muttering "Anundorum."
But list! What second shape doth rise?
What prescient tremor fills my breast—
Oh joy! beyond expression blest!
Borooah's self I recognise.
He smiles upon me, calls me pal,
That peerless name's original
In mould corporeal expressed!
He deigns with me to talk and jest,
To chaff, drink pegs, and all the rest,
As man doth with his fellow man.
Grown bolder, I address him thus—
You know, my Nundy, tattlers say
That, ere you passed the other day
You played a horoscopic hoax
On our good easy English folks
By dropping out an awkward year
In counting up your age's sum."
The Nundy lists with pricked up ear
And eyes me with an artful leer,
Then parting one hand's finger tips
He puts unto his nose the thumb,
And drops from scarcely opening lips
One syllable of meaning, "Mum"!
This said, he vanishes; and I
Awake and desolately cry—
Where art thou gone, my friend! my chum?
Anundorum, Anundorum,
Anundorum Borooah!

Thus night by night, thus day by day,
That jarring sound assails my peace,
No charm will drive the pest away,
In vain I struggle for release.
The victim of a new disease—
To wit "Borooah on the brain"—
I feel that not by slow degrees
I grow, beyond all hope, insane.
Soon! soon will dawn my day of doom
When intellect's remaining spark
Will fail and leave me in the dark
To sink into an early tomb.
The friends I leave behind to weep
Will raise a tablet chaste, though cheap,
To mark their grief at moderate cost
For one so young, so early lost;
And graven on the marble cold
My pitious tale will thus be told—
"Here lies, by trouble vexed no more,
The bard of Sabsechotapore;
He lived beloved, he died demented,
Killed by a name of sound more wild
Than e'er was for a fork-tailed child
In Pandemonium invented.
Then traveller pause, let fall a tear,
And, shuddering, read recorded here
The name of doom, the name of fear,
Anundorum Anundorum."
The king of sounds uncouth and queer,
Of all that can revolt the ear—
Cacophonous compendium!
Anundorum Borocah,
Anundorum, Anundorum!
Anundorum Borooah.

Sabsechotapore, 1870.

THE MONEY ORDER DEPARTMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The statement made in the columns of your valuable journal, regarding the transference of the Money Order Department, a branch of the Accountant General's Office, to the Paper Currency, is now rectified by the appearance of the notice in the issue of your yesterday's journal, and the public shall deem it a great favour by your giving place to the following few lines at the earliest convenience, as it affects their interests.

Many complaints have recently appeared in the columns of your journal regarding the trouble and the loss of time to which the public are subjected, which I now do not deem necessary to trouble you with a repetition of the same, to which this department does not seem to have paid the least attention, and I have no hesitation in saying that the contemplated transference will bring with it an additional loss of time and trouble. Under the existing arrangement many have ceased to do business with the department and resorted to the Mercantile Banking Corporation, and to the freer use of the currency notes wherever hoondies or cheques cannot be procured. From my own personal experience I can say that I had frequently to go to this department for cashing orders, as my trade being chiefly confined in the mofussil, and I regret to give out that I never left its door without cursing it. Finding no relief, I was at last obliged to write to my customers never to send me any more remittances in the shape of Money Orders. Now, Sir, when the department located close to the Treasury is removed to a distance of about half a mile, how much inconvenience will it cause to the public I leave you to imagine.

And as this Government Banking Corporation has more connection with the Treasury, I would humbly suggest our benign Government and the Accountant General to transfer it to Her Majesty's Treasury, New Bank of Bombay, which if approved will remove the complaint, and the object for which this institution has been started by Government will be realized and the benefits appreciated by the public. Sir, you will move the Accountant General, who is an able and wise officer of Government, to take at once this important matter into his kind consideration and to facilitate, by every means in his power, the convenience of the public, and to revoke his order.

26th November. A MERCHANT.

THE POST OFFICE AND BANGHY PARCELS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Paganini, when in his prime on the violin, said he was only in his infancy; and perhaps the post office systems of the world may be said to be in their infancy. Infancy, however, has a considerable range. The English postal system is without question the postal infant par excellence, the infant that would carry the first prize at a show of the world's postal infants, for size, weight, intelligence and beauty. Where our Indian postal infant would stand in the competition, we need not trouble ourselves to enquire. It is a good strong infant of considerable promise, and has, I believe, at the present time a very good nurse looking after the development of its limbs and viscera—a nurse who is not conceited, but willing to give attention to any hints that may be thrown out for the benefit of young hopeful.

Well, now, there is a rule about banghy parcels being sewed up in wax-cloth or some sort of cloth and tied and sealed at the seams and fastenings. This is required at all seasons and in all cases. It strikes me as being very absurd that this should be so, besides being a practice that causes the public a great deal of annoyance and trouble. If I am sending a sample of wood by banghy, why should I put it in wax-cloth and seal it? If I am sending a valuable shawl or dress, why it is not sufficient that the post office receiver tells me that it is at my own risk? I know, and so does every one, that it is at my risk, and every one knows that if it be put in tin and hermetically sealed, that it is at my risk still, and that the post office will take no share of that risk. A rule that gives the public so much unnecessary trouble seems to me to be an unwise rule. If I am silly enough to send a pound of seeds in tissue paper, I am well served rightly enough if I pay postage for the delivery of an empty bag. But people are not so silly in a general way, and those who are, will not pay more than once for their folly. I have many points in the Post Office Directory on which I purpose to say a few words, but must not be too hard on your space at one time. THE SAME.

AFTER THE FEAST.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "BOMBAY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Those painful festivities that have been going on in your lower world—the feast of grandeur and the flow of gold; the everlasting belching of rude cannon; in short, the pompous doings of Kings and of one who in this country is greater than Kings,* have of course affected the equilibrium of your correspondent, as well as of every one else. He has not, like your charming nightingale whose "songs after sunset" you give to an admiring world, been able to keep quite out of the vortex, but has had to leave his beloved woods and

"Yon cool stream whose living waters play
And rise translucent in the solar ray."
[Sir William Jones, of Indian fame.

and act a part in the turmoil of the last eight days. During the last fortnight I should like to know if there is a single person (or married) who would have read one line of a Matheran letter, and I am surprised that your other up-country correspondents have not seen how entirely their effusions would be lost.

I don't know how you feel, Mr. Editor, after all the wear and tear of these gaieties on the top of your Editorial work, but I can assure you that I have not yet regained my breath. Those levees are the worst part of all the great doings, and are an infliction on all concerned, which it would be a great achievement to arrange differently. The confusion, crowding and crushing of the throng are truly distressing—

"In they go—in jackets and cloaks,
Plumes and bonnets, turbans, and pugrees,
As if to a congress of nations;
Greeks and Malays, with daggers and dirks,
Spaniards, Jews, Chinese and Turks,
Some like original foreign works,
But mostly like bad translations.
"In they went and hunted about,
Open mouthed, like chub and trout,
And some with the upper lip thrust out,
Like that fish for routing—a barbel.
While the big wig stood to welcome the crowd,
And rubbed his hands and smiled aloud,
And bowed, and bowed, and bowed, and bowed,
Like a man who is saving marble."

Well, I cannot write about Matheran yet I find, I can only enjoy the sweets of this lovely retreat. My mind is still heated with the glitter of gold and the roaring of cannon.

Mille bombes! Tonnerre de Dieu!!
Matheran, 25th Nov. THE EAGLE.

* This reminds me of Sir Bartle Frere at some ceremonial at Government House, Parell, when doing the polite to some Kattywar "Kings." The Political Agent was present and in his turn was addressed by Sir Bartle. He spoke of the importance of his (the Politica'o) office, on having charge of twelve sovereigns, each with the power of life and death in his hands. If that was the measure of his importance (and it seems a fair one), then what was the degree of importance of the man who put him there and could remove him? And how much greater the importance of the Viceroy who is above the Governor, who is far above the Political Agent, who has control over twelve sovereigns with the power of life and death in their hands. Where does that place our Queen? God bless her!

VISHVANATH NARAYEN MANDLIK, ARDASEER FRAMJEE MOOS, Bombay, 28th November. } Joint Secretaries.

PUBLIC DIVERSIONS.

LITTLE MINNIE and her unavoidable comic retinue are about paying Bombay a visit. Some of the travelling company are excellent when properly supported, as they should be in a large place like Bombay, and Minnie, if she will please discard the "little" which has done such capital service, is a spirited girl, and in her singing and by play reflects great credit on her trainers.

We observe Mr. Stebbing's sons are performing in Bombay. We regard these children as the cleverest carpet acrobats of their inches. The confusion of limbs by which the young Japanese acquire so many laurels are quite child's play to Frank and Johnnie, who learnt the act when it first became public property.

The companies who at present occupy the boards will, we fear, rapidly make change of pasture. It is against business to expect full houses when so many dinners and balls and Government ceremonials have to be attended to.

BOMBAY GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Bombay Geographical Society was held in their rooms, Town Hall, on Wednesday, the 16th October 1872, at 5 o'clock P.M.

Present.—Commander G. T. Robinson, late I.N., Vice President, in the chair; Rao Saheb Vishwanath Narayan Mandlik; Lieut. W. L. Searle, late I.N., F.R.A.S.; J. Burgess, Esq., F.R.G.S., M.R.A.S.; K. R. Kama, Esq.; Barjorji Sorabji Ashburner-Esq.; James Taylor, Esq.; Bhagwandas Purshotamdas, Esq.; J. Connon, Esq., M.A.; J. Macfarlane, Esq.; Dhirajram Dalpatram, Esq., G.G.M.C.; R. G. Walton, Esq., C.E., F.R.G.S., F.A. S.L.; the Rev. J. S. S. Robertson, M.A., F.R.G.S., M.R.A.S.; T. Ormiston, Esq., C.E.; M.I.C.E.; and Lieut. Henry Morland, late I.N., F.R.G.S., F.R.A.S., Honorary Secretary.

The business before the Society was to consider a proposal received from the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, which was already approved of by the General Committee of this Society, for a junction of both the Institutions, and to nominate a Sub-Committee to confer with that of the Asiatic Society for arranging the conditions on which it should be effected.

The Honorary Secretary having read the notice calling the general meeting, the Rev. Mr. Robertson submitted that he was unaware of any definite proposition before the meeting, that probably members of both Societies might object to amalgamation as he himself did, and was averse to place the matter in the hands of a Sub-Committee before it was exactly known what was really the proposition, and how it affected both Societies.

The Chairman explained that a proposition for the amalgamation had come before the Society, and some of the members desired it, the present general meeting was called to enable members to give expression to their views on the subject, and, if desirable, to appoint a Sub-Committee to confer with the Sub-Committee of the Asiatic Society, and determine on what terms the amalgamation could be made; the result of this confer ence to be communicated to the Society at a general meeting to be called as early as convenient, which general meeting would determine whether or not amalgamation was to be effected.

Mr. Burgess in an eloquent speech dwelt on the advantages of amalgamation to the two Societies, and the cause of natural science generally.

The Honorary Secretary followed in the same sense, and dwelt with much force on the pecuniary benefit to both Societies, as well as showing that very many members of the Asiatic being members of this Society, the work of amalgamation was already begun.

Rao Saheb Viswanath N. Mandlik and Mr. Macfarlane followed with some very pointed remarks to the same effect, and which were warmly received by the meeting, and after some general conversation in which all the members present took part, the following propositions were carried unanimously:—1. Resolved, that the Society entertains with favour the general proposal to amalgamate the Bombay Geographical Society with the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. 2. Resolved, that to carry out the proposed arrangement the following members be appointed a Sub-Committee to confer with that of the Asiatic Society, and thereafter to submit the conclusions arrived at to a general meeting of this Society for confirmation or otherwise, as early as convenient:—

Commander G. T. Robinson, late I.N.; T. Ormiston, Esq., C.E., M.I.C.E.; J. Macfarlane, Esq; Lieut. W. L. Searle, late I.N., F.R.A.S; Rao Saheb Vishwanath N. Mandlik; and Lieut. Henry Morland, late I.N., F.R.G.S., F.R.A.S.

The meeting then terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

ITALY.

(FROM THE "TIMES'" OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

FLORENCE, OCT. 28.

It is not to be supposed, because in my previous letter I dwelt especially on the difficulties and sufferings of Italian landholders, that other classes are not equally pressed upon by the financial necessities of the State. The ricchezza mobile or income-tax is an enormous impost, as the foreign holders of Italian bonds by this time know, and on this tax also rates may be levied by the local administrations to an amount equal to that paid to the State. The house-tax is another heavy charge, which has to be paid even when the tenements are unoccupied—at least for the first year, if not longer. If the house remain empty beyond a certain time, there is a process by which the tax may be recovered. The octroi (gate dues) is also a heavy tax, odious and inquisitorial in its nature, expensive of collection, and which weighs on all classes. It is divided in certain proportions between the state and the municipalities, and is applied to many things which escape it in most other countries where it exists. It is levied not only on provisions, wine, oil, fuel, and other articles of daily consumption, but on most things indispensable in a household—clothes, china, kitchen utensils, &c. Thus many imports from foreign countries, which have already satisfied the claims of the national Custom house, have to run the gauntlet of a series of internal doyane, which take toll upon them in every town they enter. As an example, we may suppose goods to be sent by land from Genoa to Spezia. They must pass through the intervening town of Chiavari, which seizes them at its gate, and suffers them to proceed only when it has received its dues. This is an manifest an abuse—however much it may be within the letter of the law as interpreted by the Minister of Finance—that it has led to very urgent representations from important commercial cities, and the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce appointed a committee to inquire into the matter, which committee has not yet made its report. But no complaints and no committees can get rid of the hard fact that Italy, in order to meet her liabilities, must continue to be one of the most heavily taxed countries in Europe—perh ps the more so of any, in proportion not to her natural w alth but to its development. A foreigner might reside a long time in the towns like Milan and Turin without perceiving this. He might hear rich bankers and merchants talk angrily of the large slice the income-tax took out of their profits, but he must seek the real sufferers in other classes, and especially in that whose income is derived from land and houses. The small landed proprietor must exert himself vigorously if he would earn even a poor living and avoid running into debt. He might do much to improve his cornfield and vineyards, and also his farm yard, his kitchen garden, and orchard. This is the very country for the introduction of agricultural machinery, because the [illegible] which elsewhere might be injured by it, the [illegible]'s consulting room, the author's library, the artist's studio, must wait till work is scarce, and labour is more plentiful.

The architecture of the new city, so far as it can be judged at present, is principally noticeable for its massiveness, its grandeur, and the variety of the material used in its composition. Vermont marble, New Hampshire granite, Ohio sandstone, Lake Superior brownstone, all these are used in the erection of new Chicago, with an indefinite number of other varieties from neighbouring States, and some from Transatlantic quarries. It is allowed on all sides that Chicago's destruction has been her gain from an architectural point of view, and it is found that, in the erection of business buildings, the various owners have in nearly every instance shown their anticipation of greater trade by adding increased height and breadth to their houses. Throughout the city, too, the new buildings are one or more stories higher than those which were destroyed.

So, though the place—which in the northern portion, whither the rebuilding has not yet extended, by its strange desolation reminds one oddly enough, of Pompeii, is only, as it were, half formed though its pavement is perforated planking, and its roads are mere ragged ruts, business is prosperous and amusements thrive. There is probably nothing which a reasonable man could want which cannot now be obtained in the city; but only listen to the Chicagoese as they chatter about the future. Their bridges are now hideous and wooden, but their river hall soon be spanned by viaducts which the Thames ora the Seine would burn to own. Their Lincoln-park is pretty (it is, indeed, most beautiful with its charming conglomeration of water, wood, and verdure), but wait until it is increased by the addition of the cemetery, from which the bodies are already being removed. The drive by the Lake, which has no eye boundary, and on the shores of which the waves break as on the sea beach, is delightful; but wait until we have our Boulevards ("Bully-vards," is the Chicago pronunciation) stretching round our city 25 miles long! Making allowance for all exaggeration—and the people of the West are given to "blowing"—there is no doubt that the future Chicago will be a magnificent city, though possibly not to be compared in interest to the wide area, here half-built, there wholly devastated, over which I have to-day been wandering. And what a strange and incongruous medley of people it attracts in its present state! Pottering among the ruins, I came upon a gallant ex-colonel of Dragoons, whose seamed and sunburnt face is as well known at the Senior United as it was in the Indian Mutiny; the name of an English novelist, announced to open "The Star Lecture Course," blazes on the tottering walls; and the first person who greeted me as I stepped out of the "stage" at the Tremont House was one of the M. P.'s for Westminster.

Finally, let me place upon record the delight of the inhabitants of Chicago as they see their city rising in renewed beauty and grandeur around them. "The fire has done you good rather than harm," I observed to the hotel clerk. "Good!" he replied, with a chuckle, "I guess the people at St. Louis are just now making up their minds when they'll burn their village down, to try and get a chance of coming up to us."—Daily News.

SPRATT'S PATENT MEAT FIBRINE
DOG CAKES.

Used in all the kennels of the Nobility and Gentry of England. They are recommended to gentlemen in India as the best food that Dogs can have; they keep well in any climate, heat having no effect upon them. A better food for Dogs in a hot climate could not be imagined; and in a notice of these Cakes in the Field, 3rd June, 1871, the Editor says—"We have not the slightest doubt but that Dogs of all kinds can be kept in good health and condition on these Cakes. If fed on these Cakes the life of the Dog would be much longer and certain than is now the case in hot climates." 5 cwt., packed in a cask, free on board in England, at 20s. per cwt.; for a ton or more, 18s. per cwt., free on board.

All orders must be accompanied with a remittance, or London reference.
